Michael Colburn convalescing

Parents of Michael Colburn, Ann and Randy Randazzo, would like their friends and neighbors to know that Mike is healing ahead of schedule, that he has come out of surgery with some excellent results, and that he is beginning to have some feeling in his legs.

Ann and Randy would like the community to know their heartfelt appreciation to everyone.

Subsequent to his accident, Mike required some 20 pints of blood. At least 30 people who heard of the need responded without any requests, and many of the donors were unknown to the family. The Carmel Valley Kiwanis offered their entire bank of blood.

There were so many thoughts of love and concern: Churches that have remembered Mike in special prayers; people who came by the store to offer help, and all kinds of genuine demonstrations of caring; gifts to the hospital of plants, games, flowers, homemade candy, cookies and cakes; friends who took time out from their busy holiday schedule to visit Mike and those who closely follow his condition and progress.

Ann, Randy and Mike have been deeply touched; it is an experience with the people in the community which they will never forget, and though they cannot thank each and every one in person, they are deeply aware and send their most sincere appreciation to everyone.

The day after Thanksgiving Mike miraculously survived an auto accident on Aguajito Road that took the lives of three teenagers. For a while his life was hanging on a slender thread; both arms had multiple fractures; there were head injuries, and he was paralyzed from the waist down. In long hours of surgery it was discovered that the spinal cord had not been destroyed and that some vital nerves had not been severed by the broken bones. Orthopedic and nerve specialists have put things back in place and bone grafts are starting. Mike has regained some use of his arms and each day brings about steady and gratifying progress. Feeling the pain in his knees and toes now is great news because it means nerves are beginning to work again, and the bones and muscles are already in therapy.

We are glad to share in this family's thankfulness and joy. They've seen love in action from people who've reached out and really cared. They know, as you do, that Carmel Valley is a very special place, down in the hearts of the folks here.

Valleyites in Oakland

Christmas dinner at the Oakland home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Thomas was enjoyed by Buena Vista Del Rio residents, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Tate. In addition to the reunion with his sister and brother-in-law, they visited with members of both their families who live in the Bay area.

Grandchildren visit

Grandchildren, Jeffrey Tod and Brian Brooks, hung their stockings in Carmel Valley and assured Mr. and Mrs. Ron Hunter a visit to their home from St. Nicholas. Accompanying the four and six year old from their home in Los Gatos were their parents — the Hunters' daughter and her husband — Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Brooks.

Children welcomed

It is doubtful that any of their holidays spent in Embassies in faraway places with strange sounding names were any more special to Mary and Jack Jernegan, than this one in their Rancho Road residence where they welcomed home their daughter, Joan, from her home in Venice, Calif.; their son, John from San Francisco; and closed the family circle with a holiday phone call to their son Jeffrey who is living in Tennessee with his wife and child while attending law school.

Also sharing family festivities was Mary's mother, Mrs. Grace Brownrigg.

CHS Band benefit

The Chamber Orchestra of Chapman College in Orange will appear in a benefit concert for the Carmel High School band on Friday, Jan. 14 at 8 p.m. in the Carmel Mission.

Under the baton of John Koshak, associate professor of music at Chapman, the orchestra will perform selections chosen from its tour repertoire which includes music by Siegmeister, Weber, Mozart, Rossini, Ives and Stravinsky.

The concert is being sponsored by the CHS band with all proceeds going into the band's fund for a planned trip to Mexico in May. The band has been invited to perform in a parade and band festival in Mexico City. Tickets for the concert may be purchased through the band department at CHS or at the door the evening of the concert.

The appearance is part of the orchestra's annual January inter-term tour which this year will include appearances at high schools and churches in 11 cities.

Koshak also directs the Chapman Symphony Orchestra and the Orange County Youth Symphony Orchestra. He has been conductor of the Bergen County Youth Symphony in New Jersey and the All-Southern California High School Honor Orchestra. He serves frequently as clinician and guest conductor for honor orchestras and has conducted the orchestras of the Northern Arizona Summer Music Camp, the University of Redlands Summer Music Clinic and the University of Southern California-Idyllwild School of Music and the Arts.

Koshak also has presented clinics and conducted orchestras at the Music Educators National Conference and at the California Music Educators Association Southern Section conference and state conference.

Chamber celebrates

One of the loveliest dinner parties of the season was that of the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce held at the Carmel Valley Inn.

Arrangements for the affair were made by Linda Vance assisted by Roger Strange, Stella Moore, and Bill Browder.

Seventy-five members and guests were seated at tables beautifully decorated in the holiday theme by Bob Reinken.

Jovial Jack George portrayed a "Super-Santa" in charge of the door prizes; while Al Gilmore led a community sing of Christmas carols.

Holiday guest

Mrs. James Brice was welcomed to Carmel Valley for the holidays by her daughter and family, Dr. and Mrs. Eugene Kerfoot and three daughters. The Kerfoots are residents of Los Tulares.

New home in Texas

Amarillo, Texas is the new home for Bill Browder who left the Valley last week for the Lone Star state. Bill was a director and active member of the Carmel Valley Kiwanis and the Chamber of Commerce.

The Valley Take-Out will continue under the management of Delsey Browder assisted by her son, Don Carter.

Welcome mat out

The Egon Werdelmans of La Rancheria recently had an opportunity to repay the hospitality extended to Egon 20 years ago when his destroyer visited New Zealand. Welcomed as their house guest was H. Leslie Trevena-Brown who had served as Egon's host so long ago in Wellington.

They also enjoyed a week's reunion with Cmdr. Phyllis Schultz who had served as Egon's secretary when they were stationed in Japan.

By coincidence, when Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Schnepf crossed the "red and green" welcome mat this last week from Sheldon, New York, she happened to be a friend who had served as Anne's secretary also, 20 years ago when she was executive of an organization. The Schnepfs had first flown to Arizona to visit their daughter and grandchildren before coming to California.

Another holiday guest greeted by Egon and Anne was Dorothy Dorr, an old friend who recently moved to Monterey from San Diego.

Community Chapel Guild

Ladies of the Valley are invited to greet old friends and meet new ones at the Wednesday, Jan. 12, 12:15 p.m. potluck luncheon meeting of the Carmel Valley Community Chapel Guild.

Co-hostesses, Mrs. Rudolph (Vera) Bautz and Mrs. John (Olga) Darch will be assisted by Mrs. William (Vera) Meyer and Mrs. Vera Stokes. They request that those planning to attend bring their own table service and a salad, dessert, or hot dish to share.

Mrs. Del Garlinger and Mrs. Chet Behan, Salinas members of the Monterey County Cowbelles (an auxillary to the Monterey County Cattlemen's Association to promote beef through education) will present a program demonstrating the cutting of beef. The various cuts of meat will be awarded as door prizes following the demonstration.

Those attending may also look forward to receiving some new and delicious beef recipes.

Garden Club

A demonstration-lecture on orchids and their culture will begin the new year of informative meetings for the members and guests of the Carmel Valley Garden Association.

Thomas H. Rose, roving consultant for the Rod McClellan Nursery, will be the featured speaker and cordially invites one and all to bring their questions conferning the exotic plants to the meeting on Thursday, Jan. 13, 8 p.m. in the Tularcitos Multipurpose Room.

THE CARMEL HIGH SCHOOL BAND is still working on a number of fund raising projects to help pay for their trip to Mexico in May. Among other things, the band is sponsoring a concert by the Chapman College Chamber Orchestra on Friday, Jan. 14 at Carmel Mission. All proceeds will go the the band.

RAIN CAME TO THE VALLEY in great spurts beginning last week, but not enough to dramatically alter the water crisis or overcome the effects of two years of drought conditions.

Master plan committee

Ordinance to regulate development on agenda

A proposed interim ordinance, to regulate development during the time the Carmel Valley Master Plan revision is underway, will be presented to the master plan committee Thursday night at their first meeting of the year.

The proposed ordinance, prepared by the staff of the Monterey County Planning Department, will be discussed but probably not voted on at the Thursday meeting, to be held at 7:30 p.m. in St. Dunstan's Church on Robinson Canyon Road near the Farm Center.

According to planning commissioner Bill Peters, who also acts as temporary chairman of the study committee, the interim ordinance proposal was requested by the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association. The county supervisors referred the matter to the planning commission and the study committee. At their last meeting, planners asked staff to draw a possible ordinance up for consideration by the newly formed master plan study committee.

Peters expects the study committee to discuss the proposed ordinance, but then to take it home for consideration before voting on it at the next meeting.

The committee's third meeting since formation will once more be largely organizational. Subcommittees and assignment of members to these subcommittees will be worked out, as will recruitment and selection of others in the community to serve on the various study groups. A permanent meeting place and procedures for the next six months will also be considered.

Also at the meeting, Mo Orrett, supervising civil engineer for Monterey County, will speak about the circulation element (traffic and highways) for the valley and proposed public works projects for the area.

CARMEL VALLEY MARKET

Randy Randazzo was born and raised in Monterey, and managed various Peninsula Purity grocery stores for 25 years. He bought Carmel Valley Market from Mrs. Bennett in 1972, and became his own boss in a food store that is vastly different from a big chain. Ann Colburn was a regular customer when Randy bought the store, where they met. They were married in June 1974, and have eight children between them, three of whom are still at home: Dorn, Michael and Julie. Randy's son Horace is his right-hand man in the store.

If you go in and browse around, you'll find unusual and gourmet items that make any meal a memorable occasion: Reindeer meatballs, canned octopus and abalone, imported sardines from Portugal, pompadums from India, etc.

You'll also run across witticisms perched about the shelves that make for merry shopping:

"A word to the wise — who can tell them anything?"

"Wisdom: That's what you get from longevity."

"He who laughs last missed the joke."

"A doctor a day keeps the apples away."

"There will be a 10 per cent surcharge on any sales where we have to listen to your troubles."

The Carmel Valley Market and Monroe's Meats make home deliveries every day beginning about 2 p.m. to homes from River Ranch on the west to Cachagua Grade Road at the Wagon Wheel on the east.

MONROE'S MEATS

John Monroe was in the meat department of Purity Stores for 22 years, and probably will be most remembered at the counter of the great old "Los Tiendas" Market at Del Monte and Tyler in Monterey. He bought Eddie Capon's Meats at the Carmel Valley Market in October of 1975 and was joined by his son John in April of last year. John and Randy Randazzo have known each other 15 years through their work at Purity. Monroe's specializes in top choice and prime grades of beef, but they have a wide variety of other meats and fresh fish daily from the Monterey Bay when weather permits. John wants to give old-fashioned service, in that he still believes his customers are very important and he wants to give the best of service and finest meats.

He and his wife, Vi, live in Salinas, and he says he looks forward to coming to work in Carmel Valley every morning, away from crowds, and into the finest weather and friendly people, relaxed atmosphere, and no hustle and bustle. Sometimes grandson John-John drops by for a visit, and John has a moment to joke with him. He really enjoys his "old-fashioned country store" atmosphere.

Natural litter helps control soil erosion

University of California scientists studying erosion on foothill and mountain slopes have discovered that fallen leaves and other natural litter don't seem to protect the soil unless they cover at least half of its surface.

Michael J. Singer, soil scientist on the UC Davis campus, reported that tests with three types of dead vegetative material common in California — wild oat straw, blue oak leaves and redwood needles — all gave similar results.

"It is only after 50 per cent of the soil surface is covered that erosion is reduced," Singer recently told members of the Soil Science Society of America. But above the 50 per cent point, he added, the more natural litter there is the less erosion takes place.

Speech in Carmel

Wildlife threatened by 'killers'

Killers hired by the Federal Government are destorying the wildlife on public lands in the western states, an environmentalist leader charged in a speech at the La Playa Hotel Tuesday.

"Government agents killed 81,471 coyotes, 3,909 foxes, and 2,559 bobcats in 1975 in a predator extermination program that is a national disgrace," said Dr. John W. Grandy, of Defenders of Wildlife.

Dr. Grandy, speaking before the Annual Meeting of the Monterey County SPCA at the La Playa Hotel, declared that this loss is only a fraction of the total destruction of wildlife. More predators are killed by private individuals, both legally and illegally.

"The public lands and wildlife — your lands and wildlife — are being assaulted," Grandy said. "Bobcats, for example, are disappearing; the killers found 9,000 in 1970, but five years later they could get their hands on only 2,559." Grandy continued, "The killers use a veritable arsenal consisting of rifles, airplanes, deadly gasses, anticoagulents, lethal poisons, barbed wire, trained dogs, booby traps, painful snares, and the infamous leghold trap."

"Closer to home, in the Hunter Liggett area, 70 miles south of Monterey, the same destruction is occurring," said Grandy. "On a trumped up scare of bubonic plague, the Army wants to launch a wholesale ground squirrel extermination program, using the deadly toxicant compound 1080. Far from halting bubonic plague," charged Grandy, "the program is actually to benefit private grazing interests. Not only have children been poisoned by 1080, but use of such a deadly secondary poison will only make ecological matters worse." "In fact," said Grandy, "use of 1080 would not even provide lasting help to the private ranchers who are demanding ground squirrel destruction, since killing ground squirrels will only cause further imbalances in the ecosystem."

Why doesn't a smaller amount of litter give at least some protection against soil erosion? Probably, Singer said, because it concentrates the runoff onto sizable bare spots, causing additional loss of soil in those areas.

In his research, Singer uses a laboratory rainfall simulator which can produce an artificial "rainstorm" of different intensities on various slopes. In this way, repeated tests are possible under identical conditions.

"What do you look for in a horse? What's the one thing you look at first?", challenged the Arab Horse Breeder. He looked the audience in the eye as each tried to come up with the one- most- important- thing- about-a-horse. Then, as breeders are likely to do, he went on to answer his own question without waiting for an answer. "A good head, a fine, dry and breedy head, with an expressive eye."

We've been brooding about that question for some time ... speed of response is not the cornerstone of our reputation. Repartee in our book is the snappy answerbacks we think of on our way home from the party.

What we look for in a horse as the number one important thing — assuming of course that all the horses we're considering have passed their vet checks — oh yeah, also that they're not absolutely crazy or savage — the first, most basic requirement is: a good walk.

Now think about that one for a while. How a horse is put together and how he uses his put-together are two different things. Both have to be good to produce a good walk.

Think about all the snakes, turkeys and other scaly horses you've ever ridden. When you first climbed aboard, thumped them sixteen times in the bread basket with booted heels, and had them shuffle off like a ton of bricks imitating a hula dancer, did you know right away what kind of horse you were on? Did you enjoy your ride? Did the horse act like he enjoyed it too?

Now think about the best horses you've ever ridden. When you got on they moved right out and took you along. How many good horses have you known with bad walks? Not very many is right! It don't mean a thing if it ain't got that swing!

At a slow walk, three hooves are on the ground at once. The hind foot lands several inches behind the hoofprint made by the front hoof.

As the horse moves out at a walk with more speed, the hind hoof comes further under him, meeting and even over-reaching the print left by the front hoof. Because of the longer flight path of the hoof through the air, each foot remains in the air longer and only two feet are on the ground at a time.

Now here's what most people do not understand: the fast walk is not any faster than a slow walk. Huh? How's that again? The fast walk may even be slower than a slow walk.

That is, if you picked this horse up off the ground and held him in the air like a toy horsie and made his little feet go through the motions, you don't have to go through the motions any faster to do a fast walk than for a slow walk.

It ain't what you do it's how you do it.

If you were sitting on the fence with your eyes shut you'd hear that the slow walking horse is putting out just as many clippety clops a minute as the fast walking horse. He's just not traveling as far per clippety clop.

The difference is in the length of stride and the amount of oomph the horse puts into it. With only two legs on the ground at a time he's got to put enough spring into his step that he doesn't fall on his face before the next leg comes down.

Springiness is a necessary part of a good walk. Try it yourself. Try jogging in place. See how much spring you're getting off your tarsals and metatarsals? Now try the same thing keeping your heels on the floor. Ooops! Slowed you right down didn't it? If the horse isn't flexing his feet, he can't walk out. That's the kind of horse who will break into a trot to catch up with his friends.

If you want to speed up a slow walking horse, it doesn't make sense to goose him with both legs or tap him with a crop. You don't wish to speed up the steps, you wish to lengthen them.

Pressing the horse's sides with first one leg then the other will do it. Since the horse's drive comes from his hind end, try to leg him just as the hind hoof comes off the ground and starts its forward swing. Your leg pressure keeps that hoof in the air long enough to bring it way forward under the horse's body.

Some horses, especially those in the habit of taking short strides at a walk, try to trot instead of swinging out at the walk. But they telegraph it half a stride ahead.

When doing a fast walk the horse has his weight alternately on two feet on the same side (a lateral) then on a pair of diagonals, then on the other set of laterals. That's two feet on the ground at a time. When the horse is going to break into a trot, he tells you he's going to break while supported on lateral legs and then he comes down trotting on the diagonal. He tells you be raising his head and putting in a short step on the lateral leg.

Pulling on the reins at this point is not terrifically helpful — that just raises his head and raising his head is part of the horse's act anyhow. But if you put a leg into his side and hold that offending hoof into the air until it has completed a long stride the horse has to complete another sequence of clippety clop before he's in position to break into a trot again. The effect is this: when you feel a trot coming on, closing your knees may hold the horse down.

'Henry V' film scheduled Jan. 11

The film will be shown at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, January 11, and tickets will be available at the door beginning at 7 p.m.

Directed and produced by Olivier, the film features Felix Aylmer, Robert Newton, Leo Genn, and Esmond Knight in the cast. Opening with an aerial view of 16th century London that takes the camera into Shakespeare's Globe Theatre, the film begins by focusing on the stage on which the play was originally acted and the audience for which it was performed. Dissolving into the play itself, the film joins Prince Hal as he and his army embark for France and the Battle of Agincourt.

The classic theatre film series is presented on the second Tuesday evening of each month at 7:30 p.m. September 1976 through June 1977. All performances are open to the public.
